BIO

Jaxsen is a dedicated professional with a B.A. in Agribusiness Management from Michigan State University, where he developed a solid foundation in the principles of agriculture and business management. During his time at Michigan State, Jaxsen gained extensive knowledge in agricultural economics, supply chain management, and environmental sustainability, which ignited a lifelong passion for the agricultural industry.

With experience as a project manager in the water and electric utility industry, Jaxsen has successfully led complicated construction projects, collaborating with various stakeholders to enhance productivity and efficiency. His strategic planning and organizational skills have facilitated the execution of projects that address key challenges in the utility industry. By leveraging analytical skills and a keen attention to detail, Jaxsen has consistently delivered results that align with industry standards and meet project objectives.

A steadfast advocate for ethical practices in farmland transactions, Jaxsen is deeply committed to ensuring that all dealings are fair, transparent, and responsible. He actively promotes integrity within the agricultural community and strives to build lasting relationships based on trust and mutual respect. His dedication to ethical transactions not only enhances the reputation of the agribusiness field but also contributes to the sustainable development of agricultural resources for future generations.
